

Sharing a meal with family or friends isn't just about eating, it's about connection. But for those with swallowing difficulties, it can feel impossible.

Did you know a speech-language pathologist (S-LP) can help with that?

Dysphagia, or difficulty swallowing, can affect people of all ages. If left untreated, it can have a devastating effect on a person's social, emotional, and physical well-being. S-LPs play a vital role in assessing swallowing function, working with healthcare teams to improve safety and efficiency, and finding solutions that support both nutrition and quality of life.

Find an S-LP Today

Make an S-LP part of your care team today.

sac-oac.ca/for-the-public

Speech-Language &
Audiology Canada
Communicating care