

Imagine having thoughts, feelings, and needs— but no way to express them.

Did you know a speech-language pathologist (S-LP) can help with that?

Many of us take speaking for granted, but for those who cannot rely on speech alone, communication can feel like an impossible barrier. S-LPs help bridge this gap through augmentative and alternative communication (AAC) which includes tools, strategies, and technologies that support communication.

Find an S-LP Today

Make an S-LP part of your care team today.

sac-oac.ca/for-the-public

Speech-Language &
Audiology Canada
Communicating care